

CUNY SCHOOL OF LAW

APPLIED LEGAL ANALYSIS

Permission to take 1 credit version of ALA (5 credit Core/ALA)

Name:

CUNYfirst ID:

Semester:

.....
Academic Dean or Director of Academic Advising Signature Date

.....
Instructor's Signature Date

.....
Student's Signature Date

* Under exceptional circumstances, when a student is planning to graduate at the conclusion of the fall semester and must take both Mastery and Application of Core Doctrine/Applied Legal Analysis and a 12-credit clinic during the fall, exceeding the permitted 17-credit cap, a student may be permitted to take a modified one-credit version of ALA (a five-credit version of Core Doctrine/ALA). Permission to take this course must be granted by the Senior Associate Dean of Academic Affairs, or the Assistant Dean of Academic Affairs, and, also, by one of the course instructors, in their sole discretion.

A student who has been permitted to take the modified one-credit ALA (five-credit Core/ALA) must attend the once per week three-hour skills workshop (class) alongside students enrolled in the standard two-credit ALA (six-credit Core/ALA course) and complete all doctrinal lectures online outside of class time, just as the students enrolled in the six-credit course are required to do (this includes all of the lectures assigned to the students in the six credit course). The student enrolled in the modified five-credit course will be required to submit some, but not all, of the homework assignments that the students in the standard six-credit course must submit, but all students will be given the same access to all of the homework assignments. A student who has been granted permission to sit for the modified five-credit course understands that the instructor reserves the right to test on any material covered in any of the assignments, including homework assignments that were not required to be submitted by a student taking the course for five credits. The student enrolled in the modified five-credit course understands that he/she will be required to take the same examinations as the students enrolled in the standard six-credit course.

You must register for both Core Doctrine and Applied Legal Analysis separately. They are two courses that are co-requisites.

You must take this form to the Office of Registration (Room 4-109) to complete registration for this course.